Freak Weather Brings Flu Toll Up In County

No Races In School Elections

County school trustee races are uncontested to date with a filing deadline of March 5 set on the April 4 school elections.

In Cameron Forrest Sapp and Dr. John Martin have filed for re-election. The term of Board member Charles McDermott will also expire, but he has not filed for re-election to date.

Sapp and McDermott were elected to the Board in 1964. Sapp seeks his third term. Martin, School Board Secretary, was elected in 1968.

Threee terms will expire this year on the Milam County School Board where no candidates have filed.

No candidates have filed for the Milam County School Board where the terms of John B. Henderson, Sr., Don G. Humble and Willie Glaser will all expire this year. Henderson represents Pct. 2, Glaser, Pct. 1, and Humble is a trustee, county at large.

In Buckholts the terms of school trustees Wilburn Beckhusen, Henry Vaculin and Albert Svetlik will expire in March. No one has filed.

Only one trustee term expires in Maysfield this year, that is the seat held by Ernest Dodd.

County School Supt. H. D. Maxwell said candidates for the Buckholts or Maysfield boards could file either with the local board or in the county office.

At Milano, the terms of school trustees E. C. Westbrook, board president, and Arnold Kornegay are expiring.

The Gause school board will have 2 vacancies.

Rockdale will elect two school trustees in April and incumbents Brice Crow and Dr. Phillip Young have both filed for re-election.

Christian Church Has New Pastor

Rev. H. J. Swink of Olney, Texas, has been called as pastor of the First Christian Church and assumed his duties Sunday, February 1.

Rev. Swink, his wife and son Jerry moved to Cameron during the past week from Olney, where he has been pastor of the First Christian Church for one year and also served a church in nearby Archer City.

The First Christian Church for the past two years has been served by ministers on a part time and weekend basis.

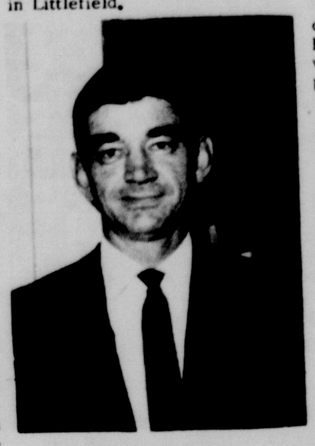
Earlier Rev. Swink also served as pastor of the First Christian Church in Dublin for two years and in Littlefield for four years.

He is a native of Perryton, attending high school in Plainview. He also attended South Plains Junior College at Levelland for two years; Texas Tech at Lubbock, majoring in psychology and English, and Tarleton State College at Stephenville. Also he attended Pastoral Institute at Philips University in Enid, Oklahoma.

Mrs. Swink also was a student at South Plains Junior College and she and Rev. Swink met there.

They have three children -- Jean, 18 Jo Anne, 17, and Jerry, 15. Jean, a senior, and Jo Anne, a junior, will remain in Olney to finish the spring school term. Jerry, an 8th grader, is attending school here.

Rev. Swink has a keen interest in civic and community affairs as well as the church. He served as president of the Ministerial Alliance in Dublin and treasurer in Littlefield.



Rev. H. J. Swink

In civic affairs he was a member of the Lions Club in Olney and Dublin, volunteer fire department, and interested in the Little League and the Boy Scouts. He also has served on the Board of Directors, Erath County Mental Health Association.

28 Degree Low Follows Record High

If Wednesday had been Ground Hog Day there would be no doubt about more winter weather coming in the next six weeks.

Afternoon temperatures in central Texas climbed to record highs under a bright sun that would have made the ground hog put on sunglasses.

And the highs came just a week after some of the most bitter cold this winter.

According to tradition, if the ground hog, emerging from hibernation on February 2, sees his sahdow, he retreats to his home, indicating six weeks more winter.

Friday's morning low of 28 degrees was in marked contrast to Wednesday's high of 82 in Cameron. That high, however, is still below the 90 degree winter high recorded on February 26, 1954.

The widely fluctuating temperatures being experienced since Christmas may be in part responsible for the growing spread of flu-like and respiratory illnesses reported in Milam and other areas.

The Milam County Health Unit said Rockdale doctors reported 150 cases of flu for the past week. Schools in Cameron report about normal absenteeism for this time of the year, and hospitals report heavy case loads, also normal for January.

No figures on the number of flu cases in Cameron were available at the Health Unit. "The doctors may have been too busy to fill out the report this week," a spokesman at the Health Unit said.

Also plaguing children and adults this winter is what appears to be a "new" strain of the common intestinal flu -- the illness, instead of ending after the usual 24 hours of misery, tends to recur days or weeks after the first onset.

Schools On Monthly Fund Basis

Veto of the Health, Education and Welfare bill last Monday left Cameron schools operating on a month to month basis for federally funded programs.

The Cameron schools had been approved for $105,044.00 for this school year, but the money has been forwarded at a rate of about $10,000 monthly awaiting the education appropriation bill.

Cameron Supt. D. R. Dodson said deadline on the emergency funding expired January 31, but he said this would probably be extended until an appropriation bill is passed.

Dodson said the monthly allowance has paid for administration, aids, food and supplies under the Title I program. An additional request for $9,050.00 has been tentatively approved for additional equipment and supplies.

Panel To Discuss School's Future

Camerons' future school needs will be the subject of a panel discussion at the February 5 meeting of the Cameron PTA.

Supt. of Schools D. R. Dodson will moderate a panel of community, business and school representatives: Hilliard Thomas, banker and school trustee; Colman Duncum, president of the Cameron School Board; Mrs. Herbert Nance, high school science teacher, and E. A. Perrin, Mayor and former school superintendent.

A question and answer period will re reserved following the panel discussion.

Dodson said the discussion would center on the schools physical needs, particularly the pressing need for a cafeteria and auditorium. "We also are going to have to make room for the kindergarten program (slated to begin in 1973) and for an expanded vocational program," he said.

"another major change that must be faced is the immediate need to start the school year in August. This is going to call for some changes in our present buildings."

The panel will also go into the teaching equipment needs, the anticipated school district population athletic facilities and possibilities for financing upcoming building programs.

Mrs. Louis Elley, PTA president, said "This discussion will be of concern to everyone in the school district and for this reason are extending an invitation to anyone who is interested, whether or not they are members of the PTA or parents of school children."

The program will be at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 5, in the Ben Milam Cafetorium.

Footballs No. ls' Try Basketball

The Texas Longhorn football team will play basketball in Rockdale to benefit Little League baseball.

Game time will be 7:30 p.m., Saturday, February 7, at Rockdale High School Gym. Football notables James Street, Bill Zapalac, Bob McKay, Bill Atessis, Tommy Asaff, Jim Bertelsen, Cotton Speyrer, Tom Campbell, and Randy Peschel will be on the court.

Bill Alford of Rockdale's Little League said tickets will be on sale at the door. Admission will be 75 cents for students and $1.25 for adults.

NEW POLICEMAN JOINS CITY FORCE

A former Rockdale patrolman has been hired by the Cameron Police Department to replace Jack Brooks, who moved to Angleton.

Wayne Brinkley, 23, is the newest patrolman on the local police force. He is married and has one child.

Nigliazzo To Open Clinic

Dr. L. L. Nigliazzo has announced plans to open a medical practice in Rockdale. He has been associated with Newton Clinic in Cameron since 1962.

Dr. Nigliazzo has leased the offices of Dr. T. C. Green who moved from Rockdale last summer. He said he would open the clinic by mid-week.

The Nigliazzo family will continue to reside in Cameron for the present, but plan to move to Rockdale in the future.

140 Miles Of Hamburgers

By Alice R. DuBois

Millions, maybe billions of hamburgers are eaten by Americans every day--little ones, big ones, good ones and bad. But to many people in Cameron, there's only one kind--that's a Tex Miller hamburger.

Cameronites move, vacation and go off to wars, but all yearn for the day when they can come back to the little stand on North Fannin and eat one of Tex's hamburgers -- delicious, juicy, and mouth watering.

Tex said he first went into the hamburger business with a friend. They had a stand facing First Street on the west side of the Henderson building. One day his friend, needing money, offered to sell Tex his stock for thirty dollars. Tex took him up on the deal and he was launched in a business that provided food and a job, when both were scarce. About a year later he opened his present stand.

He sold his first hamburgers for ten cents, but remembered making a smaller economy size one with cabbage that sold for five cents. He didn't know exactly the most hamburgers he'd ever made in one day but recalled selling twelve hundred on one occasion when Cameron celebrated her centennial, cooking six hundred of these in two hours time.

Roughly I'd say he's made about two million hamburgers during his thirty years as "Hamburger King." That's over a hundred and forty miles of hamburgers. Tex wouldn't fight for the local title he's been given, as he's shy and modest about his cooking talents, but many who've eaten his hamburgers would make every effort to defend it--at least verbally.

Tex starts preparing ingredients for his Texas size hamburgers about eight o'clock in the morning. He gets the meat from a local market, freshly ground, with just enough tallow mixed in to hold it together and shapes the meat into small balls, a little larger than golf ball size. He chops fresh bermuda onions, crisp green lettuce, and with a thing sharp knife slices tomatoes and pickles and stores all of this in his large refrigerator. This takes most of the morning. His first customers usually come in about eleven o'clock and Tex starts his hamburgers on a seasoned slightly oiled grill.

I watched as he slapped twelve meat patties on the hot grill, then wiped his hands on the white apron he always wears. He puts just the number of patties on the grill for the number of hamburgers he's making. Once, he told me, a customer from across the street rushed in and wanted a burger in a hurry. Tex obliged and it wasn't until about fifteen minutes later that Tex discovered an extra patty on the grill. He finally remembered. He rushed his helper across the street to tell the man he'd forgotten to put the meat on his hamburger but it was too late--he'd eaten almost all of it. The man said he thought it tasted kinda funny but he didn't know why.

TEX'S SECRET

When I asked Tex if there was anything special he did to make his hamburgers so good he thought for a minute and said "no, I just try to use fresh stuff." I've heard he'd throw out a lug of tomatoes if they didn't look just right. That's part of

IRS NEWS

Taxpayers in many Texas cities will be able to take additional deductions on their Federal tax returns for local sales taxes, according to R. L. Phinney, District Director of Internal Revenue for southern Texas.

As a service to those taxpayers who itemize their deductions on Schedule A of Form 1040, the IRS has prepared four sales tax tables which are available at all IRS offices.

These tables are complete in themselves in that the State sales taxes have been copied from page T-4 of the tax instruction pamphlet and placed under the column "State." Thus, a taxpayer refers to the table for his city, locates the appropriate income bracket, then adds the two figures under "State" and "City" columns for that bracket. The sum is his total deduction for sales taxes in Texas.

Tax tables are furnished for the convenience of those taxpayers who itemize deductions on their Federal income tax returns, but who wish to use an "average" amount and therefore avoid detailed substantiation. Of course, taxpayers have the choice of itemizing the actual amount of State sales taxes paid.

"I Shall Keep This Lent"
"LENT" means springtime. It is an old Latin word which means a forty day fasting period next before Easter. It begins with Ash Wednesday and continues till Easter; exclusive of Sundays. It is a time for the conditioning of our soil . . . a time for our Souls to become penitent. It simply means that it is spading up time, the season for planting seeds and for setting blooming trees.
In the realm of the spirit it is a call to get ready for the season of beauty and goodness.
Who amongst us is satisfied with what he is or what he has been? Then let us qualify for the Lenten Season. Let us clear away the rubbish of last year's crop, cut under the old stalks. May we learn from our Lord to give ourselves to good conditioning during Lent. The miracle of Lent is genuine repentance which leads to Newness of Life. A Saintly Keeper of Lent said it well when he spoke the words, "I shall keep this Lent, and hope to refresh my Soul." Amen

BOOK REVIEW

TV Sold Nixon, McGinniss Says

The Selling of the President 1968, by Joe McGinniss, available at Cameron Public Library.

"I've been had," may be your reation to this book if you had trouble choosing between Presidential candidates in 1968 and were swayed by Richard Nixon's television campaign.

An extremely readable account of that campaign, the book is written by a young man who lived with the technicians, ghost writers, experts, and pollsters from the campaign's early stages until election day. McGinniss is a writer for a number of newspapers, most recently the Philadelphia Inquirer.

"That there is difference between the individual and his image is human nature," McGinniss wrote. "Or American nature, at least. That the difference is exaggerated and exploited electronically is the reason for this book."

McGinniss said Nixon failed in his 1960 campaign because "he was too few of the things a President had to be -- and because he had no press to lie for him and did not know how to use television to lie about himself." In the now famous television debates with John Kennedy, what defeated Nixon was not his beard but his hunger shown by the camera, according to McGinniss. "The camera portrayed him clearly," the author says, "America took its Richard Nixon straight and did not like the taste."

For the 1968 campaign, Nixon gathered about himself a group of men attuned to the political uses of television. They included William Gavin, who wrote in one of his memos dealing with the importance of image: "Voters are basically lazy, basically uninterested in making an effort to understand what we're talking about. . . get the voters to like the guy and the battle's two-thirds won."

Harry Treleaven, hired as creative director of advertising in the fall of 1967, went to work on the more serious of Nixon's personality problems. One was his lack of humor; another was his lack of warmth, according to Treleaven's memos.

Raymond K. Price, former editorial writer for the New York Herald Tribune, became Nixon's most prominent speech writer in the campaign. "It's not the man we have to change, but rather the received impression," Price wrote. "What, then, does this mean in terms of our uses of time and of media? For one thing, it means investing whatever time RN needs in order to work out firmly in his own mind that vision of the nation's future that he wants to be identified with. This is crucial. . ."

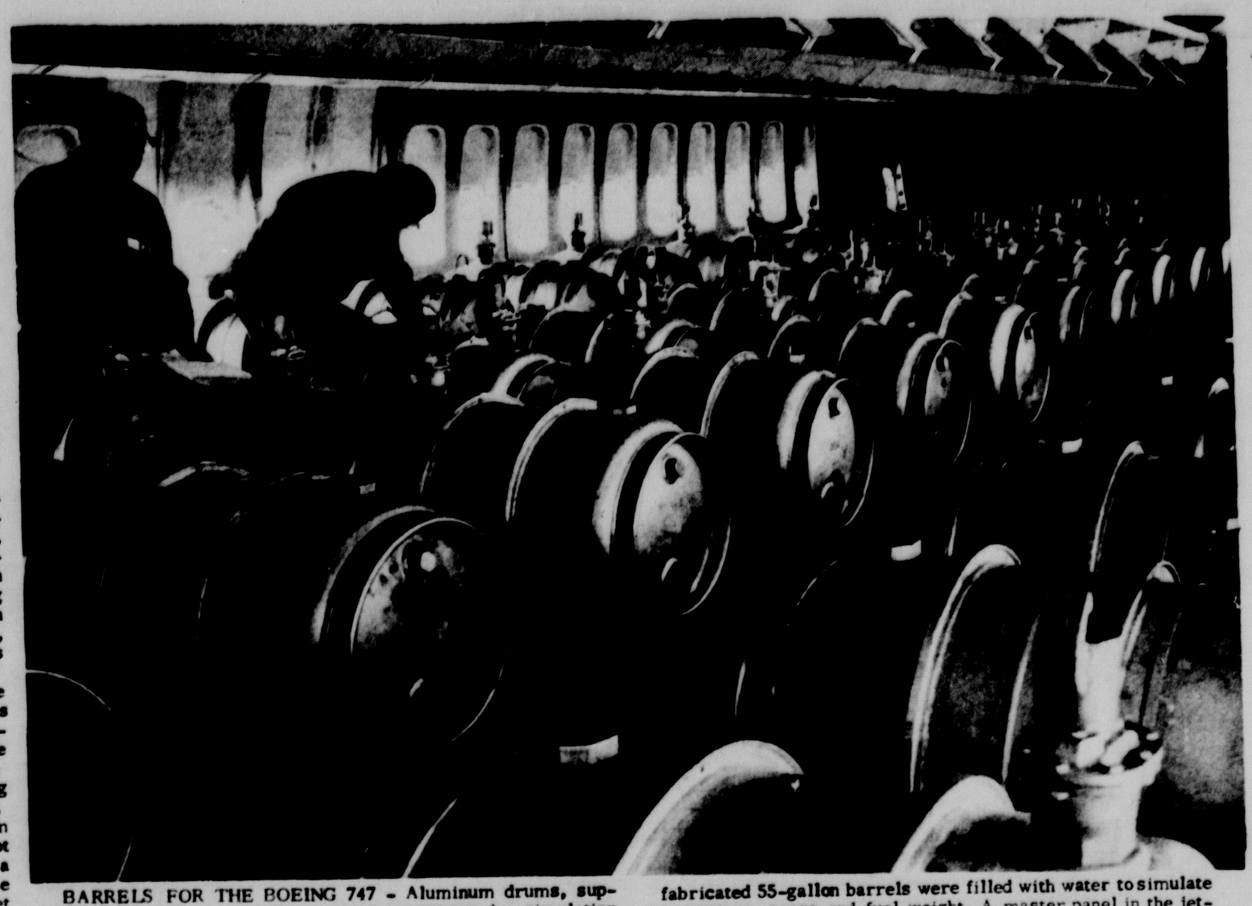
So, McGinniss said, at the age of 54, after 20 years in public life, Richard Nixon was still felt by his own staff to be in need of time to "work out firmly in his own mind that vision of the nation's future that he wants to be identified with."

"So this was how they went into it," McGinniss said. "Trying, with one hand, to build the illusion that Richard Nixon, in addition to his attributes of mind and heart, considered 'communicating with the people. . .one of the great joys of seeking the Presidency,' while with the other they shielded him, controlled him, and controlled the atmosphere around him. . .

"They could do this, and succeed, because of the special nature of the man. There was, apparently, something in Richard Nixon's character which sought this shelter. Something which craved regulation, which flourished best in the darkness, behind cliches, behind phalanxes of antiseptic advisors."

Roger Ailes, the executive producer of the Mike Douglas Show, was hired to produce one-hour programs, with Nixon in the middle of a group of people, answering questions live. During one conference on the shows, Ailes said, "Now you put him (Nixon) on television, you've got a problem right away. He's a funny-looking guy. He looks like somebody hung him in a closet overnight and he jumps out in the morning with his suit all bunched up and starts running around saying, 'I want to be President.' I mean this is how he strikes some people. That's why these shows are important. To make them forget all that."

McGinniss makes no judgments: he simply catalogs the facts about a political campaign waged mainly in our living rooms via a media that has since been accused, by the Nixon Administration, of slanting the news.



BARRELS FOR THE BOEING 747 - Aluminum drums, supplied by Alcoa aided Boeing test engineers by simulating passenger and cargo loads during flight testing of the largest jet airliner ever built in the United States. HEINSATH'S BOOK REVIEWED FOR CLUB PROGRAM

The Pleasure and Profit Club met January 22 at the home of Mrs. Walter H. Lester. Guests were invited into the dining room where they were served chicken salad, party crackers, olives, pickles, individual pecan pies, jellied mints and coffee.

Mrs. Franklin Drgac assisted the hostess at the serving table. Which was laid with a pink linen cloth and centered with an arrangement of holly.

Mrs. B. F. Grimes served as president pro-tem during the business meeting.

Miss Ada Margaret Smith presented the program, a review of Herman Heinsath's "Pioneer Texas - A Geometry Lesson." Miss Smith said the author explained how all things have form and how form is changed by geometric figures to meet the needs of individuals.

"Put a house, barn and sheds together one comes up with a farm," Heinsath writes. "Place a house, by a house, by a house and you have an open space town."

The book also describes the architectural structure of the early churches.

George Washington Drank Tea

Did you know that George Washington was a great tea lover and that he kept a cow in lower Manhattan just to provide milk for his tea? The important point about this information is that he used milk, not cream or lemon.

Tea experts say that milk lets the true flavor of tea come through—while cream "coats" the distinctive flavor and lemon merely changes it to a lemon flavor.

However, whatever you prefer in your tea, be sure to make it properly. An aromatic, full-bodied cup of tea still requires (1) a teapot to keep the tea hot during the brewing, (2) bubbling, boiling water to extract the flavor goodness from the leaves, (3) 1 teaspoonful tea or 1 teabag per cup for a hearty, flavorful beverage and (4) a brewing period of 3 to 5 minutes to allow the leaves enough time to unfold and release their flavor.

A George Washington birthday celebration would never be complete without a special cake or pie with cherries. So to pay full homage to the Father of Our Country, try this Cherry Log.

George Washington Cherry Log
(Makes about 8 servings)

3 eggs
¾ cup sugar
2 tablespoons melted margarine
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Grated rind of 1 lemon
⅔ cup pancake mix
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
½ cup candied cherries, chopped

Beat eggs until light and foamy. Gradually add sugar; continue beating. Stir in melted margarine, lemon juice, rind and pancake mix. Grease well a 10 x 15-inch shallow pan. Cover with waxed paper to fit bottom of pan. Sprinkle with flour. Pour batter into pan. Bake 12 to 15 minutes or until done in hot (400°F.) oven. Immediately turn out onto towel dusted with confectioners' sugar. Remove paper. Roll cake in towel. Cool 10 minutes. Combine whipped cream and chopped cherries. Unroll cake: Spread filling within ½ inch of edges. Roll tightly.

HEALTH MATTERS

It is extremely important that you and your children keep protection against smallpox up to date. True, the absence of smallpox in this country has led to a lack of public concern about this serious disease, and large segments of the adult population are unvaccinated or require boosters.

In some parts of the world smallpox continues to be a serious problem. If just one single undetected smallpox case should be introduced into a U.S. community, it could touch off a serious epidemic.

Is it true that a baby is protected by his "natural immunity" acquired from his mother? Some of a mother's natural or acquired immunities, if any, can be passed on to her unborn infant as her blood courses through the placenta that nourishes him, but this inherited immunity remains effective for only a short time.

In the case of whooping cough, a highly contagious disease that is especially dangerous and often fatal for small babies, there is evidence that immunity is only occasionally passed on.

Auto Tags On Sale Monday

New blue and white 1970 license plates go on sale Monday (today) at the Milam County tax collector's office and most vehicle owners will find the process quicker this year.

It is not necessary for owners to bring their title and receipt for last year's license plates when they buy new ones.

Three-part renewal application forms were mailed to all Texas vehicle owners in January and the owner need take only the form and the fee to the county tax office.

The form should not be torn apart. The tax office clerk will put a sticker on the form, collect the fee, and hand over the plates, a faster process than the previous method.

Instructions are printed on the forms, which also include a note on the back stating, "If you have sold this vehicle, destroy this form." New vehicle owners must bring their title and registration receipt.

Owners can register their vehicles by mail until March 1 by sending the registration application to the county tax collector, with the registration fee plus $1 for handling and postage.

April 1 is the deadline for registering vehicles in person.

CONTRACT LET FOR SEAL COAT ON COUNTY ROAD

A contract for seal coat work on 198 miles of highways in the Bryan district has been awarded by the Texas Highway Commission.

The project includes 7.6 miles on FM 486 in Milam County, from US 190 at Pettibone to the intersection of FM 487. Also 10.7 miles in Robertson County on FM 979 from Calvert to FM 46.

Brannan Contractors, Inc. of Victoria was awarded the contract. Guy R. Ward of Bryan is the Highway Department engineer in charge of the project which will take an estimated 45 working days.

The work will be under the supervision of District Engineer Joe Hanover, and will be in nine counties.

Bats seem to have plenty of energy, because when they are at rest their temperature drops to body heat, instead of the temperature around them.

Poage Urges Increased Rural Water Development

WAXAHACHIE

Increased development of central pressure water systems for rural communities and farms in their areas was urged here tonight by Rep. W. R. Poage in a speech before the Texas Association of Rural Water Corporations.

The veteran Central Texas Congressman, co - author with Senator George Aiken, R-Vt., of a 1965 law authorizing Farmers Home Administration loans and grants for such projects, told his audience that support of city legislators is vital for continued expansion of the five-year old program because they control Congress and what it does in the way of appropriating funds.

In order to get the support and cooperation of the urban district legislators, lawmakers interested in rural development must be willing to support measures predominantly of interest to cities, Poage said.

"I think one of the best illustrations of this point lies in the vote to kill rats in the large cities," he continued.

"A couple of years ago an item was included in the Appropriation bill for rat control in the slum areas. Although many of our Texas areas have long used federal trappers to eradicate predatory animals, a number of our Congressmen felt that this was an unwarranted waste of federal money. They said, 'Let these people kill their own rats,' but I voted for the rat control - not because my people in Temple or Waco were suffering from rats, but because my stockmen in Bosque and Limestone counties, and the rest of my district, were suffering from screwworms and I wanted the screwworm program to continue, and I knew it would not continue if the Congressmen from the big cities ever got the idea that we were opposing everything that came along which benefitted only city people."

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D. Commissioner of Health

Are the so-called "childhood diseases" limited only to children and do adults have an immunity to them?

Not so, says the Texas State Department of Health.

The childhood diseases are a myth. The fact is that these diseases are so contagious among children that most people have had them by adulthood and thereby have developed immunity. But adults can and do catch them, and when they do they are sometimes much sicker than children.

Two of these co-called childhood diseases--mumps and German measles (rubella) -- have special dangers for the adult patient. Mumps can be damaging to both adult men and women And German measles, when occurring in the early part of pregnancy, can result in damage to the unborn child.

A new vaccine may eventually lead to the eradication of German measles, but there is a danger until all women in the child-bearing years have been immunized against it.

So, if you are exposed to any "childhood" disease and believe you have never had it, ask your doctor what you can do to protect yourself.

his secret--freshness and cleanliness. It's in evidence everywhere. I've always noticed how clean he keeps his grill. The inside of his place, not much larger than child's outdoor play house, is enameled white, and looks so clean it takes on the appearance of a hospital operating room.

The chairs are the desk type. Tex got the idea from school desks--the kind used when he went to school. They are just the right size for a burger and drink. They're lined up against the wall--an arrangement he's used since he first opened up. Tex scrubs the floors and walls every night with soap and water. I usually takes him about two hours after closing time to clean up. I've seen him many times about ten o'clock at night with a garden hose washing off the sidewalk and street in front of his place. His helpers used to do most of the cleaning up, but he and his wife manage to do most of it now.

It wouldn't seem right not to mention Sammie, Tex's wife. Petite, pretty and neat she's been his constant and faithful helper for the past few years. She keeps the orders straight, gets the drinks, puts the finishing touches on the burgers and tidies up the desks after each customer finishes eating.

The delicious hamburgers in combination with the white-washed look of cleanliness accounts for the plaque displayed just outside the door. I was there the day Tex got the David Wade sign in the mail. David is the Duncan Hines of the Southwest, and former Cameronite. I felt proud, along with Tex, as that cinched an opinion I'd had all along. This sign seemed to put the final stamp of approval on his cooking ability, being able to make hamburgers that were good enough for an epicurean.

Just this morning a friend showed me a letter her son-in-law stationed in Viet Nam wrote. It read in part, "Thanks mom for the cookies; they were really good. The boys in our outfit sure enjoyed them too. I'll be glad when I get home and have some good home cooked food for a change. Among other things I can't wait to eat one of Tex's hamburgers."

LETTERS..

Dear Editor:

I am trying to trace my family tree and need help in finding descendants of my family who might help me with family history. Two of my families lived in Milam Co. during the period of 1850-1860. I am sure some of their descendants still live in that area. Do you have a column devoted to ancestor hunting?

I am hunting for descendants of Alexander and Jane Black who had children named William, Marion, Elizabeth, Wade, and John. They probably had some older children also not listed in the 1850 census.

I am also hunting descendants of William and Delilah Nicholas who had children named Druscilla, Delilah, John, Jacob, Mary, William, Wade, and Catherine.

I would appreciate it if you could pass my letter on to anyone who might help me or if you could print my request for information.

Yours truly,
Mrs. Garland Owens

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Talking Back to the Boss

Fred, a toolmaker, saw red when the foreman told him he was doing something wrong.

"Step outside," Fred cried angrily. "We'll fight it out."

But instead of accepting Fred's challenge, the foreman informed him that he was fired. In due course, Fred put in a claim for unemployment compensation. However, in a court test, his claim was turned down. The court pointed out that he had lost his job solely because of his own bad temper.

Unemployment compensation laws usually do disqualify, in varying degree, the man who is fired for insubordination. The reason is that these laws are intended to help the workman who is the innocent victim of economic forces, not the workman who makes his own trouble.

But it is also true that, in keeping with the beneficent purpose of unemployment compensation, the workman usually gets the benefit of the doubt. That is, he will not be disqualified if his misconduct was nothing serious.

For example, a court refused to disqualify a workman who had been fired just for remarking to his supervisor:

"You don't do much of anything."

The court said this offhand comment was simply too insignificant to deprive the man of his right to compensation.

Furthermore, the courts will take into account any provocation that might have brought on the workman's outburst. In another case, a mechanic paused in his work to wait for further instructions. His employer, passing by, began to swear at him for being idle, refusing to listen to any explanations.

Finally the mechanic said:

"Don't you cuss me. Fire me."

The employer did fire him for his "insolent" attitude. But when the matter was taken to court, the judge ruled that the man was still entitled to full unemployment benefits.

"We believe in elementary justice," said the judge, "that an employee possesses the inherent right to resent verbal abuse on the part of his employer."

MOD Localizes Program . . .

Localizing the efforts of the March of Dimes in seeking to care for 12 Milam babies born with birth defects is a good idea.

The only overriding criticism of most charitable drives over the years is that it is difficult to see the results of contributions where contributions are given.

This MOD approach will dramatize the direct relationship between donor and recipient in that recipients will have names, though they are anonymous recipients to the public.

Every national charity must have leadership and in most cases, national leadership. But their public support is most complete when the evidence is convincing that money given to a good cause, such as the MOD birth defect program, is used in large percentage where it is given.

Localizing the efforts of the March of Dimes in seeking to care for 12 Milam babies born with birth defects is a good idea.

The only overriding criticism of most charitable drives over the years is that it is difficult to see the results of contributions where contributions are given.

RISKS OF WATER EXPORTS

California has led the nation in planning and expenditures for water control and diversion to meet the needs of its ever-expanding southern population. But its own troubles in this field emphasize the reasons it cannot look to the Pacific Northwest for water with any assurance of eventual diversion.

The Associated Press reports probable congressional delay in moving on the $209 million federal-state Peripheral Canal project. Some members of the California congressional delegation are against it. Gov. Ronald Reagan has yet to approve a feasibility report of the Bureau of Reclamation.

The canal would convey water from the Sacramento-San Joaquin delta and eventually to arid Southern California. Opponents say it would divert from San Francisco Bay and its estuarian system more than 80 percent of the fresh water which now maintains the salinity balance.

Bay area residents fear the diversion of this fresh water would have a disastrous effect on the ecology of the delta and the bay. But studies of this are inadequate.

Similar doubts apply to diversion of Columbia River water to Southern California and Arizona, with drop-offs for irrigation along the line. The removal of as much as 15 million acre feet of water from the Columbia could have disastrous ecological effects. The economy and population carrying capacity of the Northwest states could be harmed in a ratio far greater than the benefits to the Southwest. The time will come--as Oregon's water studies have shown--when the Northwest will need all the water that comes naturally.

Oregon, Washington and Idaho are sometimes attacked by southerners for selfishness and bullheadedness in resisting the well - laid plans for Columbia diversion. But northern Californians generally feel as we do: One region must not be destroyed or severely limited for the benefit of another region; the people must go to the resources, not vice versa.

When the Southwest has ended its wastage of water, curbed its population overkill, and fully explored the potentials of desalinization and weather control, and when a comprehensive national water plan has been achieved, the time may be appropriate to consider interbasin and interstate water diversion. It may be--but the Southwest should not count on it.

SCS NEWS—

Cooperators that have shaped waterways should consider the best grass needed for sodding the waterways.

Common or Coastal bermuda grass has proven to be good grasses for sodding waterways or sloping land. Waterways shaped on flat land could be planted to a bunch type grass, such as K. R. bluestem or in some instances drilled to a small grain crop.

Some waterways that are shaped where bermuda grass is already present can be sodded at time of shaping with the heavy equipment doing the shaping.

Louie Knapek, who farms the Birdie Carlswell farm west of Bartett did a good job of sodding his waterway. Knapek shaped the waterway last winter and sodded to coastal bermudagrass in early spring. Terraces were run and emptied on the waterway the same year, in the fall of 1969. A good cover and growth of grass was present by fall.

Knapek believes if a good seedbed is prepared and fertilizer applied and sodding done in the dormant period it is very possible to have a good grass cover and terrace the same year.

Conservation cropping system is the growing of a combination of crops in a planned rotation.

Management and sequence of growing crops brings the desired benefits to meet the needs of cultivated land for soil improvement.

Two types of cropping system may be used on cropland. A drilled small grain each year on the same area is one type. A row crop combination with a rotation of the crops is another type.

High residue crops whether drilled or part of a planned row cropping system, when fertilized becomes soil improving crops.

Assistance and information is available to cooperators and landowners to help them work out a planned conservation cropping system.

Contact your local Soil Conservation Office for any needed assistance on Conservation practices.

'69 Was Record Year For Alcoa

PITTSBURGH, Pa.

Aluminum Company of America today reported all-time record revenues, earnings and shipments for 1969.

Net imcome was $122.4 million, compared with 1968 earnings of $104.7 million. Net for 1969 amounted to $5.58 a common share, 17.5 percent higher than 1968 earnings of $4.75 a share. The previous record net earnings were $108.4 million in 1967.

Sales and operating revenues amounted to $1,545.2 million, a 14.2 percent increase over 1968 revenues of $1,352.8 million. The prior record was $1,373.0 million in 1966.

President John D. Harper reported that shipments of aluminum products by Alcoa and consolidated subsidiaries rose during 1969 to a record 1.58 million tons, an 18.1 percent increase over the 1968 record of 1.34 million tons. He credited the gain to strong demand for aluminum here and abroad, and to a variety of successful Alcoa marketing programs.

A combination of increased sales and firmer prices for most aluminum products contributed to the record revenues and net income, Harper indicated. Also contributing to the net income gains were greater returns from Alcoa's extensive real estate and foreign investments, including sales of certain real estate investments.

Stressing Alcoa's commitment to seek new opportunities to increase the company's return on investment, Harper cited a number of recent moves toward this goal. Among them were the creation of new company divisions to market its technical abilities in the area of environmental controls and to consolidate a broadening involvement with residential building and property development.

Also noted was the company's pursuit of a policy to be selective on orders taken and to discontinue operations which are not profitable.

Buckholts Tractor Program

All farmers in the Buckholts area are invited to a program on Tractor Safety to be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Buckholts High School ag building.

Vo-Ag teacher Kenneth Aycock said the program, which includes a short film, will be presented by Ben Bullard, assistant safety director for the Texas Farm Bureau.

Listed on the 45-55 minute program are overturns and rearward upsets, hitching and unhitching, speed, horseplay, refueling, use of the SMV emblem, use of roll-gard and crush-proof cab, seatbelts, maintenance, and extra passengers.

Approximately 1,000 farm people are killed each year on farm tractors and machinery while over 750,000 or more are injured seriously, according to the Milam County Farm Bureau, sponsor of the safety program.

Statistics show that Texas farms are the scenes of some 25 to 30 tractor fatalities and 20 to 25 farm machinery fatalities each year.
